Kings Landing

Nestled in a majestic setting in the St. John River Valley, Kings Landing Historical Settlement depicts the one hundred year transformation of a young colony into a vibrant nation. Listen for the creaking wagons pulled by trotting work horses, the whooshing of hoop skirts and the distant melodies from lively fiddlers and dancing townsfolk. Witness the bustle of farm life and learn first hand how ordinary people lived and worked in the 19th century. An epic story that's more than just history, it's history, well told.

Technical Program

The Playhouse

Located in beautiful downtown Fredericton adjacent to the Provincial Legislature, the Fredericton Playhouse has been providing a professional venue for the performing arts for decades.

The Playhouse was a gift from Lord and Lady Beaverbrook to the people of New Brunswick in 1964. The only performing arts facility of its kind in the province at that time, it served primarily as a road house for touring artists. Local amateur productions were also commonly staged at the 1000-seat venue.

The construction of a new performing arts center is underway at the corner of King Street and Regent Street.

Companion Program

Justice Building

As you walk down (as the river flows) Queen Street from City Hall, the Justice Building is on your left at the corner of York. Set back behind an iron and stone fence and framed by stately shade trees, it marks the beginning of the old Fredericton Military Compound. The two blocks bounded by York and Regent Streets and between Queen Street and the river contain a rich history. The Justice Building is soon to be the former Justice Building as a new building is under construction near the corner of King Street and Regent Street.
